MedPACS Announces New PACS

Hartland, WI, November 21, 2003 – MedPACS Displays, Inc. (MedPACS) today announced a new image and report distribution and review system based on the Company's proprietary technology. Called Vista, the system is an Intranet or Internet-enabled PACS solution that allows radiologists and referring physicians to access images and reports from the hospital, imaging center, their home, remote locations - virtually anywhere.

MedPACS claims that the system is designed for busy radiology departments as well as remote image review and on-call applications. "Our goal was to provide a secure, economical, fast and efficient way to distribute images and Vista does these things," said Phil Jones, MedPACS president and founder.

After entering their user name and password, users are presented with a list of their patient's images and reports. They can search by any number of criteria including read or unread studies, providing a great load-balancing tool for radiologists. For security and to help meet HIPAA requirements, all access to patient data is password protected and images and reports are encrypted both when transmitted and when stored.

"Vista is configured based on annual study volumes and customers only pay for the studies they contract to be managed and archived in the system. We've priced the system very aggressively and it's completely scalable so capacity can be added as study volumes increase," Jones said. "And, because the VistaDisplay viewer can be quickly and easily download from our Web site, it's available to all Vista users authorized by the system administrator," Jones added.

The Company will introduce Vista at the upcoming RSNA meeting (booth #7907, north hall). Interested customers can contact MedPACS for more details (262-367-0181; www.medpacs.com)
